Body of missing Illinois boy found in shallow grave, parents arrested

Andrew Freund reported his son missing last Thursday.

The body of a 5-year-old boy who was reported missing from his Crystal Lake, Illinois, home last week was discovered buried in a shallow grave on Wednesday and his parents were arrested on murder charges, local police said.

The remains of Andrew "AJ" Freund were found in a nearby community, wrapped in plastic, based on information provided to investigators by his parents, Crystal Lake Deputy Police Chief Tom Kotlowski said in a statement posted on the department's Facebook page.

"To AJ's family, it is our hope that you may have some solace in knowing that AJ is no longer suffering and his killers have been brought to justice," Kotlowski said in the statement. "To AJ, we know you are at peace playing in heaven's playground and are happy you no longer have to suffer," he said.

The Chicago Sun-Times newspaper reported earlier this week that police had been concerned at least since September about living conditions in the home where AJ Freund lived with his parents and younger brother.

The paper said that according to police reports the home was cluttered, dirty and in disrepair, with broken windows and the overwhelming smell of feces. AJ's younger brother has been taken into protective custody, the Sun-Times reported.

The boy's father, Andrew Freund, reported him missing on Thursday morning, telling police that AJ was not in bed in the morning. Authorities launched an exhaustive search in and around Crystal Lake, about 45 miles northwest of Chicago, assisted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Police said they would conduct an autopsy on the body, which was found in a remote area of Woodstock, Illinois, about 20 miles northwest of Crystal Lake along a major highway. No cause of death was immediately released.

Television images showed forensic investigators working in a field in Woodstock, shielded by a white canopy.

Both parents, Andrew Freund and Joann Cunningham, were arrested on suspicion of first-degree murder, aggravated battery and failure to report a dead child. They were expected to appear for a bond hearing in the coming days.

An attorney for Cunningham could not be reached by Reuters for comment on Wednesday. It was not immediately clear if Andrew Freund had retained an attorney. REUTERS

Ugandan singer, presidential hopeful, claims house arrest

2 A Ugandan pop singer and lawmaker seeking to challenge veteran President Yoweri Museveni at the next election said on Tuesday he had been placed under house arrest, as the U.S. government criticized what it called authorities' "heavy-handed" use of force against citizens. Police and military personnel used teargas and water cannons on Monday to disperse a large group of Bobi Wine's supporters as they gathered for a concert at a lakeside beach resort, footage from local NTV showed. Before the concert, Wine was removed by police from a vehicle near the beach, the footage showed. Wine said he was taken to his home in a northern suburb of the capital, Kampala. In a series of tweets on Tuesday the singer said he was blocked from leaving his home by security personnel, who had told him he was under house arrest. REUTERS

Leader of citizen border patrol attacked in jail

3 The leader of an armed group that spent two months detaining migrants at the U.S.-Mexico border, drawing condemnation from civil liberties advocates, was hospitalized after he was attacked in jail, his lawyer and authorities said. Larry Hopkins, 69, was in a hospital with broken ribs after being attacked on Tuesday at the Dona Ana County Detention Center in Las Cruces in southern New Mexico, his attorney, Kelly O'Connell, said. The detention center confirmed on Wednesday that Hopkins, a federal detainee, was "the alleged victim" of a Tuesday night attack and that the incident was under investigation. "Hopkins was given medical attention for non-life-threatening injuries," county spokeswoman Kelly Jameson said in an email, adding that Hopkins had been transferred out of the jail under the direction of the U.S. Marshals Service. SEPTA to travelers: 'Respect the train'

In the wake of a deadly accident, SEPTA pleads with the public to be cautious at railroad crossings.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan@metro.us

As SEPTA gears up for its seventh annual Safety Day on May 1, the transit agency is urging pedestrians and motorists to remember the mantra, "respect the train."

"We've seen the images of devastating grade crossing accidents from across the country. On April 8, one of those accidents happened on our Media/Elwyn Line tracks," SEPTA General Manager Jeffrey Knueppel said Wednesday.

Knueppel was referring to an incident in Lansdowne in which a woman who was apparently unaware that a train was passing through tried to drive around railroad arms. A train slammed into the woman's SUV, killing her. The accident happened despite the presence of rail crossing markers, armbars and light-up signs at the intersection.

"One life is too many in an accident that could have been even more catastrophic," Knueppel said. "SEPTA remains committed to educating our communities about rail grade crossing safety in order to reduce collision incidents that result in injury or devastating loss."

SEPTA officials said rail trespassing is one of the top safety concerns, and advised people traveling by foot and car to observe important safety precautions when near train tracks and grade crossings. Closing gates, warning bells and flashing lights indicate that a train is approaching and has the right of way.

In addition to safety concerns, there are also financial considerations for those who don't observe the rules. Transit officials warned that drivers passing through flashers or crossing gates are in violation of motor vehicle laws and are subject to heavy fines. Motorists should look for road markers that indicate the safest distance for their cars to stop from the grade crossing when the gates are down.

"Never travel into a crossing until the flashing lights go out completely," SEPTA Assistant General Manager of System Safety Jim Fox said Wednesday. "There may be a second train coming from the opposite direction that will re-activate the gates. Trains can't swerve to avoid something in their way or stop on a dime like a rubber-tired vehicle."

Fox also advised against driving onto tracks at a grade crossing unless there is plenty of space to pull ahead.

"The crossing gates could come down with your car on the tracks and no room to drive forward or reverse back," he said.

And listen up — people may be under the impression that they can wait until they hear a train coming before they clear the tracks, but transit officials warned against that.

"Today's trains aren't loud. Electric vehicles and welded rails mean trains no longer make that clickety-clack noise. You won't know the train is coming until it's too late to get out of the way," said Knueppel.

Bill Cosby seeks bail following claims of bias, abuse and trial mistakes

The 81-year-old convicted actor claims multiple errors in sexual assault trial.

letters@metro.us

Disgraced comic and actor Bill Cosby is going on the attack against a Pennsylvania judge as he seeks bail during his appeal against his sexual assault charges.

According to The Associated Press, Cosby filed a motion with the PA Supreme Court on Wednesday, claiming that Montgomery County Judge Steven O'Neill has not issued his post-trial opinion explaining specific legal decisions, which Cosby's defense team needs in order to raise alleged trial errors and pursue appeals on behalf of the 81-year-old actor.

Cosby was convicted of three counts of sexual assault during a 2018 retrial in September, where he was accused of drugging and molesting a woman at his home in 2004. He was sentenced to three to 10 years in prison.

Cosby's lawyers first filed notice in December of alleged trial errors they plan to pursue but cannot specifically address until O'Neill files the opinion.

Cosby's legal team claims that O'Neill harbors a personal grudge against the former prosecutor who served as a key witness for the defense team, plus "racial hatred," and claims that Cosby is a "political prisoner" like Nelson Mandela, according to PageSix.com.

A statement posted on Cosby's Instagram account also claims that Cosby will have his "legally infirm and unsupported" conviction overturned and should be granted bail given his "advanced age."

"Judge O'Neill is purposely denying Mr. Cosby the right to file his Appeal, because he has refused to issue his 1925(a) Opinion, which outlines why he felt strongly in sentencing Mr. Cosby to three to 10 years and felt obligated to place this 81 years old blind United States Citizen (who served his country in the United States Navy), in a level (5) maximum security prison (SCI Phoenix)," the statement on Instagram reads.

Cosby is also challenging a California arbitration award that upholds nearly $7 million of the $9.2 million billed by Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan for nine months' worth of fees, claiming elder abuse and "egregious" billing practices, and of fraud for representing both him and the insurance company he was fighting in court, according to PennLive.

The defense also plans to challenge the judge's decision to assign himself the case; let five other accusers testify; and let the jury hear Cosby's prior deposition testimony about the use of Quaaludes in various sexual assault instances. They insist that Cosby had a binding promise from the former prosecutor that he would never be charged over a 2004 encounter with Temple University employee Andrea Constand at his home near Philadelphia.

As the accusations became public, more than 10 women came forward and accused Cosby of sexual misconduct.

Facebook set to receive up to $5 billion in fines

REUTERS

Facebook beat analysts' estimates for quarterly revenue on Wednesday, aided by growth in its Instagram business and a surge in advertising sales, while also setting aside up to $5 billion to cover anticipated official U.S. privacy penalties.

Shares of the company, which have surged almost 40 percent this year, were up nearly 5 percent in extended trading after it said ad sales jumped 26 percent to $14.91 billion in the first quarter, beating analysts' average estimate of $14.77 billion.

Monthly active users rose 8 percent to 2.38 billion, beating estimates of 2.37 billion, according to IBES data from Refinitiv.

Costs jumped 80.5 percent to $11.76 billion, as the company ramped up spending to improve content and security across its platforms.

The company also raised the top end of its provision for losses related to Federal Trade Commission privacy concerns from $3 billion to between $3 billion and $5 billion.

But excluding items including the potential FTC penalty, the company earned $1.89 per share, better than analysts' expectations of $1.63 per share.

The FTC has been investigating revelations that Facebook inappropriately shared information belonging to 87 million of its users with the now-defunct British political consulting firm Cambridge Analytica.

The probe has focused on whether the data sharing of data and other privacy disputes violated a 2011 agreement with the FTC to safeguard users' privacy.

Total revenue rose 26 percent to $15.08 billion, beating analysts' average estimate of $14.98 billion.

Net income attributable to Facebook shareholders fell to $2.43 billion, or 85 cents per share, in the first quarter ended March 31, from $4.99 billion, or $1.69 per share, a year earlier. REUTERS

Joe Biden talks to reporters after speaking at an electrical workers' conference in Washington, D.C. REUTERS

Minorities and older adults boost Biden atop 2020 Democratic field

Former Vice President Joe Biden, expected to declare his run for the White House on Thursday, leads in poll.

Former Vice President Joe Biden, expected to declare his run for the 2020 Democratic presidential nomination on Thursday, leads all other candidates in the race and draws his strongest levels of support from minorities and older adults, according to a new Reuters/Ipsos public opinion poll.

The April 17-23 poll released on Wednesday focused on the vote preferences of 2,237 Democrats and independents: the two groups that may select the Democratic nominee in most of the statewide contests ahead of the 2020 general election.

According to the poll, 24 percent would vote for Biden over 19 other declared and potential candidates.

Another 15 percent said they would support Sen. Bernie Sanders of Vermont, who ran a competitive campaign for the Democratic nomination in 2016.

No other candidate received more than 7 percent of public support, and 21 percent said they "don't know" which candidate they would back in a primary.

The poll measures how potential voters feel right now. Many may change their minds as they become better acquainted with the candidates. It has a credibility interval, a measure of precision, of 2 percentage points for the combined group of Democrats and independents.

The statewide nominating contests will kick off in early February next year, led by Iowa.

Biden, 76, who has sought the Democratic presidential nomination twice before, remains widely popular since he left the White House in 2016 after two terms as vice president. The former longtime U.S. senator will announce he is seeking the Democratic nomination on Thursday, a source familiar with the plans said on Tuesday.

Sixty-three percent of all Americans say they have a "favorable" impression of Biden, including 88 percent of Democrats, 59 percent of independents and 39 percent of Republicans.

In comparison, 58 percent of Americans said they have a favorable view of Sanders and Pete Buttigieg, the 37-year-old mayor of South Bend, Indiana, whose upstart campaign has out-raised some of his more established rivals this year.

All three appear to have stronger bipartisan appeal than Republican President Donald Trump. According to the poll, 44 percent of all adults said they have a generally favorable view of Trump.

Biden receives his strongest levels of support from older adults and minorities.

Thirty-two percent of adults who are 55 years old and older said they would vote for Biden over other candidates. And 30 percent of non-white adults, including about 4 in 10 African-Americans, said they would back Biden for the nomination.

The poll shows that at this early stage of the presidential campaign, Americans say they will vote for candidates who have been in the national spotlight for a long time.

North Korea's Kim arrives for summit with Russia's Putin

North Korean leader Kim Jong-un arrived in the Russian city of Vladivostok on Wednesday for a summit he is likely to use to seek support from President Vladimir Putin while Pyongyang's nuclear talks with Washington are in limbo.

The armored train carrying Kim — on his first official visit to Russia — pulled into the quayside station in Vladivostok, on the Pacific Ocean, a few hours after crossing from North Korea into Russia.

After a brief delay while the door of Kim's carriage was lined up with a red carpet laid out on the platform, the door opened and a smiling Kim stepped out.

Earlier, at a stop on the border, Kim told Russian state television he was hoping for useful and successful discussions with Putin.

"I hope that we can discuss concrete questions about peace negotiations on the Korean peninsula, and our bilateral relations," he said through an interpreter.

Kim will sit down for talks with Putin on Thursday at a university campus on an island just off Vladivostok. It will be the first summit between the two leaders, and the standoff over Pyongyang's nuclear program will top the agenda, according to a Kremlin foreign policy aide.

The meeting comes two months after a summit in Vietnam between Kim and President Donald Trump broke down over disagreement on ending the North's nuclear program.

A North Korean official heavily involved in advancing the U.S.–North Korean talks, Kim Yong-chol, was removed from a top post, South Korea's Yonhap news agency reported. He had visited the White House in January to meet Trump.

Now that negotiations with Washington are stalled, Pyongyang is looking for alternative sources of international support, including from Russia, and for possible relief from sanctions that are hurting the North Korean economy.

For Putin the summit is an opportunity to show that Russia remains a major global player despite being under sanctions itself over its intervention in Ukraine and allegations that it meddled in U.S. elections.

But analysts predicted that Kim is unlikely to emerge from the summit with any substantial promises of sanctions relief. The meeting is likely to focus more on showing camaraderie.

HONOR GUARD

Vladivostok is located a few hours from the Russian-North Korean border by rail, Kim's preferred mode of international transport.

On arrival in the city, the North Korean leader reviewed an honor guard of Russian troops in a square in front of the train station, with bodyguards looking on. He removed his black fedora while a military orchestra played first the North Korean national anthem, then the Russian anthem.

After officials from the two countries exchanged handshakes, Kim climbed into a black limousine and drove off. About 10 North Korean security guards in black suits jogged alongside the vehicle for about the first 100 yards of its journey.

Russian media reported that Kim would be heading to Russky Island, linked by bridge to the mainland part of Vladivostok, where the summit will take place and where he is also expected to be staying.

Artyom Lukin, a professor at Far Eastern Federal University in Vladivostok, said Kim would want to be seen as a world leader who has international interlocutors besides Washington, Beijing or Seoul.

"As for Russia, the Putin–Kim summit will reaffirm Moscow's place as a major player on the Korean peninsula. This meeting is important for Russian international prestige," Lukin said.

Putin held a summit in 2002 with Kim Jong-un's father and predecessor, Kim Jong-il, who also met in 2011 with Dmitry Medvedev, the Putin lieutenant who was then Russian president.

The venue for the summit is a sports complex at the Far Eastern Federal University, which also played host in 2012 to an Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit. REUTERS

Or watching a comet

Evil in plain sight

Director Joe Berlinger gives Metro an inside look at his film on serial killer Ted Bundy.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

"Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil, and Vile" premieres May 3. ALL PHOTOS BRIAN DOUGLAS

When you think of a serial killer, it's easy to imagine someone who is evil from the inside out. You see images of killers in court with a solemn look in their eyes, sinister grins and sometimes showing absolutely no remorse. Then you look at photos of Ted Bundy when he was on trial, and the man standing in front of the cameras does not exude any of these so-called "serial killer characteristics." On the contrary, Bundy was charming — he smiled, was well-spoken and seemed likable. Director and true-crime pioneer Joe Berlinger was intrigued by that very fact: How could someone with so much evil inside of them hide in plain sight?

Berlinger decided to delve into the world of Bundy and directed two pictures, the docuseries "Conversations With A Killer: The Ted Bundy Tapes" (available now on Netflix) and the feature-length film starring Zac Efron and Lily Collins, "Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil, and Vile." Both are about Ted Bundy and his heinous crimes, but from very different viewpoints. "Conversations With A Killer" focuses on Bundy and his conversations with two journalists before his execution in 1989, whereas "Extremely Wicked" takes a closer look at Bundy's relationship with longtime girlfriend Elizabeth Kendall, née Kloepfer. Berlinger wanted to focus on how Bundy was able to deceive so many people for so long, and why exactly this man was able to get away with murdering innocent victims.

"For me, Bundy defies all stereotypes of what we want to think a serial killer is," says Berlinger. "We want to think a serial killer is some dark and twisted social outcast who's repulsive-looking, because it gives us comfort that these people are easily identifiable in society, and therefore avoidable. I think Bundy teaches us the exact opposite. He was charming and good-looking and had lots of friends and people couldn't imagine that he was capable of doing these things, so he eluded capture for a long time. That's a very important lesson for people."

Berlinger was motivated to cast the spotlight on Bundy after finding out that some people had forgotten about the killer who pretended to be someone he wasn't so convincingly for so long. "I felt like it was time to remind people of a fundamental lesson that I had gleaned in my 25 years of true-crime filmmaking, which is [that] some people we least expect and sometimes trust the most are often capable of the worst evils."

Focusing on Elizabeth Kendall's point of view was paramount to make that lesson seen and heard. "The relationship with Kendall is what made the project interesting to me," says Berlinger. "I am interested in how a killer deceits [sic], how a killer can get away with a murder for so long, how a killer can lure victims to their death and how friends and acquaintances all around them missed all of the signs and clues. I think by seeing the movie through the perspective of somebody who loved and trusted him, we are able to portray that dynamic."

Bundy's looks certainly played a part in his ability to pull the wool over almost everyone's eyes, but his mind is the true puzzle. "I think he is a master manipulator and part of manipulation is convincing yourself. I think there were times he convinced himself of his innocence, just like I think there are times when people do bad things and convince themselves otherwise. It's human nature to compartmentalize. It's hard to say but I think Bundy probably convinced himself of his innocence while also being highly manipulative and aware of his manipulation."

Another puzzle the film highlights is if a master manipulator and serial killer can even be capable of loving another human being. "I'm not smart enough to tell you if he really loved her. That's one of the questions the movie explores without answering, whether it was a cover for normalcy to get away with his crimes or it was a psychological need that he had for normalcy. Love is many things to many people so it's hard to define love. If by love you mean this selfless embrace of another person and allowing that other person to be their best, which is the classic definition of love, then probably not," says Berlinger.

Bundy and Kendall's relationship seems almost normal throughout the film. She never sees the heinous acts he commits and neither does the audience — it's almost as though we are getting duped along with her. "You're going to see some incredible performances to the point of where you will suspend your knowledge through part of the movie that this is a movie about a serial killer. By the end of the film, you too may have a real sense as to what it's like to be deceived by a serial killer."

"Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil, and Vile" drops on Netflix and premieres in select theaters on May 3.

5 Travel rewards myths that could cost you

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Twenty-four years ago, I knew so little about travel rewards that I took an around-the-world trip without signing up for a single frequent traveler program. Those lost points and miles still haunt me.

Fast forward to last summer, when our family stayed two nights at a luxury hotel in Venice, Italy. Our room would have cost an eye-popping €1,500, or about $1,700, per night. Thanks to the points I'd accumulated using a travel rewards credit card, this over-the-top stay was free.

There's definitely a learning curve involved when it comes to travel rewards, but delaying your education can be costly if you love to travel. For example, many people misunderstand how much points are worth, either over- or underestimating how much free travel they can get, according to a recent NerdWallet survey.

People also makwe the mistake of carrying balances on those cards (the rewards won't make up for the high cost of paying interest), and far too many people earn rewards that they don't redeem, resulting in billions of dollars of potential value left untouched.

Don't let any of these myths prevent you from making the most of available travel rewards:

Myth 1: Travel rewards credit cards have high annual fees

Some travel rewards cards have no annual fee. Many charge somewhere in the neighborhood of $95 a year. Usually that fee can be offset by using the cards' perks: free checked bags for airline-branded cards, for example, or a free night's stay every year for hotel-branded cards. Even the high-end cards with annual fees of $450 and up typically offer airport lounge access, credits to offset travel fees, and higher rewards rates that can more than pay for the card if you're the right user.

Myth 2: Travel rewards are hard to redeem

Finding free or upgraded airline flights can be a challenge, especially for people who don't plan well ahead. The best time to book a rewards flight is typically 9 to 12 months in advance, when the airlines first make such seats available. (It also pays to check back frequently, since carriers also may add more awards seats depending on how the flights are filling up.)

Hotel rewards are easier to book since occupancy rates are generally lower. If you want even more flexibility, consider a general travel rewards card that allows you to redeem credits for travel purchases or to transfer your points to a variety of frequent traveler programs.

Myth 3: It's best to focus on one frequent traveler program

You may want to concentrate on earning rewards in a single frequent traveler program if you need a lot of points for a special trip. But that doesn't mean you should ignore other programs.

If you love to travel, it's unlikely you do so with only one airline or hotel chain. Plus, spreading your loyalty around means you can take advantage of specials and promotions that help you earn more points or make points more valuable to redeem. Travel programs also often have dynamic pricing, which means the value of rewards can vary. For example, one hotel chain could have lousy redemption options in a city, while another offers a much better deal.

Then there's the issue of devaluation. Programs occasionally devalue their points and miles, meaning it takes more of them to earn the same reward. But they tend to do so at different times. If your rewards aren't concentrated in one frequent traveler program, you won't risk having them all devalued at once.

Myth 4: Travel rewards cards require excellent credit

Travel rewards cards typically require good credit, which is generally defined as a credit score of 690 and above on a 300-to-850 scale. Some require scores of 720 and above. If your scores aren't quite there yet, look for a card that offers cash-back rewards and use those for travel.

Myth 5: Travel rewards aren't worth the effort

Travel rewards programs aren't always intuitive, and some of us invest a fair amount of time trying to squeeze the absolute maximum value out of every point.

But you don't have to be an extreme rewards hacker to benefit. It doesn't take much effort to sign up for hotel or airline frequent traveler programs, or to use a general travel rewards credit card for the spending you were going to do anyway. Sign up for the programs' email newsletters, which can alert you to special deals.

Then make a point to start cashing in those rewards, and you may see what all the fuss is about.

Sixers to meet Raptors in second round

Philly will meet the East's No. 2 seed in Toronto beginning next week.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

After disposing of the Brooklyn Nets in five games behind a 22-point victory on Tuesday night, the Philadelphia 76ers will officially be taking on the Toronto Raptors in the second round of the NBA Playoffs.

The No. 2 seed in the East, the Raptors took care of the Orlando Magic in five games, closing out their series with a 115-96 win also on Tuesday.

This second-round matchup provides a meeting of two very similar teams who have shared almost identical trajectories throughout the 2018-19 campaign even though the Raptors finished seven games ahead of the 76ers in the standings.

Both teams were plenty active during February's trade deadline. The Raptors picked up Marc Gasol from the Memphis Grizzlies while the 76ers rounded out one of the best starting five's in basketball with the acquisition of Tobias Harris from the Los Angeles Clippers.

However, the Raptors and 76ers have had limited time with their best product on the floor at the same time.

In Toronto, Kyle Lowry and Kawhi Leonard have played together just 43 times this year. Add in Gasol to the mix, and the Raptors' big-three appearances together drop to just 19.

That number is even smaller for the 76ers' starting five of Ben Simmons, JJ Redick, Jimmy Butler, Harris, and Joel Embiid, as they've started just 14 games together.

As the Sixers continue to jell, all eyes will be on the availability of Joel Embiid, who continues to deal with tendonitis in his left knee.

While Embiid was forced to miss Game 3 against the Nets, he was dominant when he was on the floor.

In four games during the first round, Embiid averaged 24.8 points per game with 13.5 rebounds.

That was against a Nets team and an inexperienced Jarrett Allen that couldn't provide any answers for him down low. It's a much different story for the Raptors, who have the advantage of facing the All-Star center while he's not playing at 100-percent.

Against Gasol, Embiid's numbers have been pedestrian over his career. In five games that saw an average of 31 minutes played per game against Gasol while in Memphis, Embiid averaged 14 points and 12.4 rebounds per game.

Add the fact that Gasol is now on a far more organized Raptors team with the best two-way forward in the game in Leonard providing defensive help, and the 76ers will have their work cut out for them.

It will call for consistent performances from the rest of the starting five, which wasn't necessarily the case during the first round against the Nets.

As of now, though, the Sixers' chances don't look great. After the Raptors won three-of-four meetings by double digits this season, ESPN's BPI has Toronto with a 75-percent chance to advance to the Eastern Conference Finals.

A New Sex Pill Takes the Spotlight as the Viagra Patent is About to Expire

A patented pill costing less than $1 a dose stands to help millions of men with failing sex lives; no prescription will be required

By Ray Wilson
Associated Health Press

AHP – A new sex pill is set to take the spotlight with the Viagra patent about to expire. But unlike the former, it won't require a prescription and is priced just under a $1 a dose.

The new pill called Vesele is part of a new class of performance enhancers for men, which work instantaneously on the body and mind triggering arousal and firmer, harder erections.

Formulated with a special compound known as an "accelerator", Vesele can transport its active ingredients faster and more efficiently into the blood stream, where it begins to work its magic.

The patented ingredient blend initiates a process known as vasodilation, which causes arteries and vessels throughout the body to expand. This allows blood to flow directly to penis and genitals, resulting in harder erections which last longer. Cialis and Viagra are based around a simlilar concept.

But what makes Vesele so remarkable, and what these other sex pills can't do, is that also directs a small portion of this blood flow to the brain, which creates feelings of intense arousal. In laymen's terms, users become incredibly excited and turned on.

This is why the makers of Vesele say their pill has worked so effectively in clinical trials. It stimulates the two most important organs for great sex, the penis and the brain.

The Brain Erection Connection

Until now, medical researchers did not fully understand the brain-erection connection. It has now been made clear with Vesele. When both are supplied with a constant blood flow, men are harder and firmer for longer...and have unbelievable sex drives.

"Most of the research and treatment methods for men's sexual failures have focused on physiological factors and have neglected the emotional ones. For the leading sex drugs to work, like Cialis and Viagra, you need visual stimulation" explains Dr. Henry Esber, the creator of Vesele.

"And although they work for some men, the majority experience absolutely no fulfillment during sex.

According to research published by the National Institute of Health, 50% of men taking these drugs stop responding or can't tolerate their side effects...and on top of that they spend $50 per pill and it doesn't even work half the time.

This is what makes Vesele so different and effective. It floods the blood stream with key ingredients which cause arteries all over the body to expand. The patented accelerator speeds up this process even more.

The result is a rush of blood flow to the penis and brain, helping to create an impressive erection and a surging desire for sex. Often, this is all men need to get going. And when taken regularly, many men say they are energized and aroused all day."

Great Sex At Any Age

With the conclusion of their latest human clinical use survey trial, Dr. Esber and his team are now offering Vesele in the US. And regardless of the market, its sales are exploding.

Men across the country are eager to get their hands on the new pill and according to the research, they should be.

In the trial above, as compared to baseline, men taking Vesele saw a staggering 85% improvement in erection hardness over a four-month period. Their erections also lasted twice as long.

These same men also experienced an astounding 82% increase in the desire for sex (libido/sex drive) and an even greater improvement in overall satisfaction and ability to satisfy their partners.

Many men taking Vesele described feeling horny and aroused through the day. The anticipation before sex was amazing. They were also easily turned on. Their moods were more upbeat and positive, too.

Faster Absorption into the Blood Stream

Vesele is made up of three specialized ingredients: two clinical strength vasodilators and a patented absorption enhancer often called an accelerator. According to an enormous amount of clinical data, each is very safe.

Research shows that with age, many men lose their desire and interest in sex. They also struggle to produce an erection firm enough for penetration.

And although there are many theories as to why this happens (including a loss in testosterone) one thing is certain, inadequate blood flow is virtually always to blame. That's why sex drug manufacturers focus on blood flow, it makes your erection hard.

But what's more surprising, and what these manufacturers have failed to consider, is that lack of blood flow can also kill your sex drive. That's because blood supplies energy for the brain. This energy is required for creating brainwaves that cause excitability and arousal.

Studies show the Vesele stimulates the entire cardiovascular system, including the arteries that lead to both the brain and penis. The extreme concentration of the ingredients combined with the accelerator ensures that this process starts quickly.

Expiring Patent Opens the Door to a New Sex Pill: Vesele is a new pill that cost just $1 a dose does not require a prescription. It works on both body and mind to increase arousal and erection hardness.

The sexual benefits of Vesele are also multiplied as its ingredients build up in the system over time. This is why many men take it every single day.

Recent Studies Show Positive Effects on Women

In the same study referenced throughout, Vesele was also shown to have an amazing (and somewhat surprising) effect on women too. That's because the same arteries and vessels that carry blood and oxygen to the brain and genitals are the same in men and women.

"In our most recent study, women taking Vesele saw a stunning 52% improvement in arousal and sex drive. Perhaps more impressive, they also experienced a 57% improvement in lubrication.

You can imagine why some couples are taking Vesele together. Everything feels better. Everything works better. Everyone performs better. It's truly amazing."

A New Frontier of Non-Prescription Sex Pills

With daily use, Vesele is helping men (and women) restore failing sex lives and overcome sexual lets downs without side effect or expense.

Through a patented absorption enhancer, the Vesele formula hits the bloodstream quickly, resulting in phenomenal improvements in erection firmness and hardness. By boosting blood flow to the brain, users also experience sexual urges and arousal they often haven't felt in years.

Where to Find Vesele

How much does location matter?

A look at how FanDuel Meadowlands is thriving.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the founder and editor in chief of MetroBet.

FANDUEL

In this mobile world, location matters less and less when it comes to business.

That's partially true in the new legal sports betting arena, which has seen big retail business in areas that you might not think would attract customers/bettors.

The top retail spot in the United States outside of Nevada is FanDuel Sportsbook's physical location right outside of MetLife Stadium in East Rutherford, New Jersey. The retail book earned revenue of $4.27 million in the month of March alone. No other retail sportsbook in New Jersey even cracked $1 million last month.

Here is how FanDuel Meadowlands stacked up against some of the other big retail names in New Jersey and Pennsylvania (March revenue).

FanDuel Meadowlands $4.27 million

Rivers Casino (Pittsburgh) $1.34 million

SugarHouse Casino (Philadelphia): $1.23 million

Monmouth Park (Oceanport, NJ): $986,251

Parx Casino (Bensalem, PA): $984,339

As you can see, it's not even close. So what's the difference here?

Easy.

The Meadowlands is pulling in New York City as it has little to no competition up north, with the majority of the physical sportsbooks in NJ in Atlantic City.

"It's the closest retail spot to the area with the biggest population in the United States. Northern New Jersey. NYC. That's been a huge driver," FanDuel President & COO Kip Levin told MetroBet.

Interestingly enough, Levin says that NFL game days at MetLife don't tend to be great days for the book.

"We share a parking lot [with the Jets and Giants]," Levin said. "So it can actually cut into the amount of people that come there on non-game days."

Proximity to pro sports stadiums will be key for many sportsbooks opening up. Rivers Casino in Pittsburgh has thrived as it is adjacent to Heinz Field. The South Philadelphia Turf Club has also done relatively strong business thanks to its location next to Citizens Bank Park.

"Retail will always be a viable part of our success," Levin told MetroBet. "There's a healthy social aspect at a physical sportsbook as people want to be there with their friends."

Sports betting 101: What are totals?

VSiN

When you're looking at the betting odds for totals, this is a reflection of the combined score of both teams. That means that you are looking at whether the combined score of both sides will go over or under a set number. (For that reason, this type of bet is also often called an Over/Under bet.) For example, the sportsbook might set the total at 66 for an Eagles game against a high-scoring opponent. This means that they predict that the two teams will score a combined total of 66 points. You will then place a wager on whether the actual combined score will be over or under that amount. If you think that one or both teams have a particularly strong offense and it will be a high-scoring affair, you would bet Over. If you think it will be a defensive struggle, ending in very low scores on both or either side, then you would bet Under. If the final score is something like 44-40, then the combined score would be 84, meaning the game is an Over. If the final score is something like 33-32, making the combined score 65, then it is an Under.

Sometimes the combined scores will land right on the total. In our example, if the score ended up being something like 34-32, then the combined score would be 66, exactly the predicted total. This situation is called a "push" or a "tie." In these cases, no one wins the bet, and you would simply get your money back. To avoid these situations, sportsbooks will often set the total at a half-number, like 66.5. This way, if the final combined score was 66, it would be an Under, and a 67 would be an Over.

Breaking down the Eagles, NFL Draft targets

Bet on Howie Roseman trading back more than forward.

ANTHONY GARGANO

Anthony Gargano is a sports radio host on @97.5TheFanatic in Philadelphia and on FOX Sports Radio.

It's always been a thing here. Yes, now it's on ABC — one of three different networks, in fact — and it's suddenly a star in Nashville.

But the NFL Draft has always mattered more than it probably should here.

Whether it was that moment Andy took Five over Ricky Williams, or the trade up for Carson, or the Festival on the Parkway two years ago that cinched the draft a roadshow to Park Avenue league suits, or obligatory bust (Danny "Fireman Sam" Watkins or Marcus Smith) — Philadelphia loves it some Draft Day.

With the Eagles selecting 25th tonight the drama is a little light, but the importance is there. With the roster being veteran-laden, the importance is there for this team to unearth some cost-effective gems in the 2019 Meat Market.

The Eagles hold seven picks this year, including 25, 53 and 57 overall. With the needs more future than now — depth on both sides of the line, linebacker, wide receiver, running back, maybe safety — the thought here is that GM Howie Roseman will look to trade back more than forward.

GETTY IMAGES

Let's take a look a possible targets.

WIDE RECEIVER

MARQUISE BROWN, WR, Oklahoma: At 5-9, Hollywood Brown is a DeSean Jackson clone. Do the Eagles buck the interior line trend and go flash with Brown as their No. 10 for the future? Probably not.

RUNNING BACK

JOSH JACOBS, RB, Alabama: The Eagles will NOT take a back in the first round. I could, however, see the Birds taking one in the second or fourth rounds. Watch the availability of Devin Singletary, FAU, and David Montgomery, Iowa St (my personal fave).

LINEBACKER

DEVIN BUSH, Michigan: With Devin White from LSU certainly gone, there's a slight chance Bush drops close to Eagles' range where they could trade up. While he is a tremendous player, no way Howie uses multiple assets on a linebacker.

CHAUNCEY GARDNER-JOHNSON, S, Florida: The Eagles could use a safety for the future and Gardner-Johnson is dynamic. Great ball skills and can cover tight ends. Just don't see the value in the position here.

MOCK 10

1. Arizona: Kyler Murray
2. San Fran: Nick Bosa
3. Jets: Quinnen Williams
4. Oakland: Josh Allen
5. Tampa: Ed Oliver
6. Giants: Jonah Williams
7. Jacksonville: J. Taylor
8. Detroit: Andre Dillard
9. Buffalo: Cody Ford
10. Devin Bush

Phillies, MLB betting previews

MetroBet breaks down a pair of games on the MLB slate for Thursday night.

Marlins at Phillies

Two toiling offenses meet at Citizens Bank Park on Thursday night as the Miami Marlins play the Philadelphia Phillies. Caleb Smith (2-0, 2.35 ERA) will be on the bump for the visiting Marlins, while the hometown Phillies counter with Aaron Nola (2-0, 6.84 ERA).

Smith allowed just one hit and three walks in six innings of work when he faced Philadelphia on April 13, earning his first win of the season. That wasn't an isolated incident for the Phillies' lineup, as they've struggled with southpaws early in the season. Their batting average against lefties is just .238, 16th among all major league teams. From last Saturday to Tuesday, right fielder Bryce Harper has just one hit and has struck out six times in 13 at-bats.

Nola has been bit by the home run ball far more often this year than he was in 2018. The Louisiana native has already surrendered seven round-trippers this season; last year, he didn't reach that mark until July 24 (21 starts). Fortunately for him, Miami is 27th in home runs per game so far this season at 0.83.

The play: Marlins vs. Phillies Under

Indians at Astros

A quality starting pitching matchup is in store at Minute Maid Park on Thursday night as Trevor Bauer (2-1, 2.20 ERA) and the Indians take on Gerrit Cole (1-3, 5.22 ERA) and the Astros.

Eagles general manager Howie Roseman. GETTY IMAGES

Could Eagles trade No. 25 pick at draft?

A move in either direction could prove beneficial for the Birds.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

NFL Draft night is upon us and the Philadelphia Eagles have a lot of work to do.

This offseason, general manager Howie Roseman has to find upgrades at linebacker, safety, cornerback, running back, and the offensive line. Some depth on the defensive line and at wide receiver wouldn't hurt, either.

That's what happens when there's a lack of depth on the defensive line behind Fletcher Cox and Malik Jackson. Or when Stefen Wisniewski departed for free agency while All-Pro tackle Jason Peters continues showing signs of wear and tear toward the end of a Hall-of-Fame career.

It has the Eagles linked to a number of different collegiate prospects, ranging from Clemson defensive lineman Christian Wilkins to Oklahoma wide receiver Marquise Brown.

But what if the Eagles aren't set on keeping that pick?

A trade in either direction could be beneficial for Roseman during the draft, which begins tonight in Nashville, TN (8 p.m. ET, ABC).

Trading up would allow the Eagles to make a more serious play at some of the top-tier defensive talents in the draft, especially when it comes to pass rushers or wide receivers.

Suddenly, the Eagles could pick up a premier wide-receiver talent like DK Metcalf, considered by many to be the best prospect at his position, if they manage to jump up five-to-seven spots in the first round.

That provides insurance at the position with Nelson Agholor hitting free agency next year while the long-term durability of DeSean Jackson is still in question.

Trading down could get the Eagles multiple draft picks in the lower rounds, including a likely second and third-round selection to help accrue as many assets as possible.

Historically speaking, we've seen teams deal similar picks and come away with similar hauls.

Jeff Kerr of 247 Sports listed the 2010 Baltimore Ravens, 2008 Dallas Cowboys, and 2006 New York Giants as teams who traded their 25th pick and received three lower-round selections in return.

The Eagles currently have seven draft picks and they are as follows:

ROUND 1- 25TH OVERALL
ROUND 2- 53RD OVERALL
(FROM BALTIMORE)
ROUND 2- 57TH OVERALL
ROUND 4- 127TH OVERALL
ROUND 4- 138TH OVERALL
(COMPENSATORY)
ROUND 5- 163RD OVERALL
ROUND 6- 197TH OVERALL
